Cop shot in the face is in stable condition

Shootout. The suspected gunman was shot dead by police.

The Boston police officer who was shot in the face from point-blank range on Friday is in stable condition.

Officer John Moynihan was among several police officers that stopped a vehicle around 6:40 p.m. Friday near Humboldt Avenue and Ruthven Street in Roxbury. Authorities allege Angelo West, a 41-year-old from Boston, exited the vehicle and shot Moynihan, a decorated six-year veteran of the force, in the face. He is being treated at Boston Medical Center.

Boston police said Sunday afternoon that Moynihan is listed in "stable and improving condition" and is expected to be moved out of intensive care in coming days.

Moynihan had undergone several hours of surgery since the shooting, according to a statement from Boston police, and doctors have successfully removed the bullet from his neck.

"I was happy to hear that he made it through surgery without any complications. It shows you what a strong kid he is and what a great medical team they have here at Boston Medical Center," said Boston Police Commissioner William Evans in a statement.

West, the suspected gunman, was shot dead during an exchange of gunfire with police at the scene. Police have said the shooting was unprovoked, and that the officers taking part in the vehicle stop did not have their guns drawn when West left the car. A woman suffered non-life-threatening gunshot wounds from the shootout and was taken to BMC.

Suffolk County District Attorney Daniel Conley said his office is reviewing the incident.

"We fully recognize the importance of transparency in a case like this," Conley said. "As we have many times before, we'll provide the community and the media the opportunity to review our findings."

Evans said earlier this weekend, "All of my officers are praying for his safe recovery.

We are all very lucky that he is still with us today."

Sunday, police and residents attended a mass at St. Patrick's Church in Roxbury in honor of Moynihan.

Commuter rail back running at 100 percent ... finally

The commuter rail is expected to be up and running at full service Monday after a hellish winter led to weeks of delays that frustrated Boston-area riders.

Commuter rail and MBTA service was hampered this winter due to record-breaking snow; Boston accumulated more than 8 feet.

The extreme winter conditions wreaked havoc on the transit infrastructure. It knocked many commuter rail locomotives out of commission. Earlier this month, Keolis Commuter Services, the commuter rails operator, only had 44 locomotives in operation, well below its goal of having 60 active locomotives.

Gov. Charlie Baker said last week state officials will have an opportunity to sit down and negotiate penalties with Keolis.

"There will be appropriate penalties," the governor said.

Keolis General Manager Gerald Francis is expected to be at North Station this morning to thank passengers for their patience. METRO

The Edward M. Kennedy Institute is set to open today. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

A slew of luminaries, including President Barack Obama, will speak today at the formal dedication of the Edward M. Kennedy Institute for the United States Senate (EMK Institute) at Columbia Point in Dorchester.

The president is expected to make remarks, along with Vice President Joe Biden,

Attorney General
talks Olympics,
weed legalization

Attorney General Maura Healey said when it comes to the Olympics she is "waiting to be convinced."

Healey, a Democrat from Charlestown, made the comments during a "Keller at Large" program that aired Sunday on WBZ-TV.

"I'm a huge sports fan and love the Olympics, but I think, like many people in the state, I'm waiting to be convinced that this is the right move for Boston and Massachusetts," she said.

Healey, who as attorney general approves the constitutionality of ballot questions in the state, indicated she would support allowing voters to weigh in on the issue through a state ballot next year.

Healey also said she does not support full legalization of marijuana in the state, saying she has concerns after speaking to law enforcement colleagues in places like Colorado and Washington state, where marijuana is fully legal.

Defense moves into spotlight in bombing trial

Trial. Tsarnaev's lawyers maintain his elder brother was the mastermind.

The Boston Marathon bombing trial shifts sharply in tone this week when prosecutors rest their case against Dzhokhar Tsarnaev and turn proceedings over to his lawyers, who have already admitted he planted explosives at the finish line in April 2013.

One of Tsarnaev's lawyers, death penalty specialist Judy Clarke, opened the trial on March 4 with a blunt statement to the jury that "it was him" who killed three people and injured 264 in the attack.

Clarke contended, however, that the 21-year-old played a secondary role to his older brother, Tamerlan Tsarnaev, in planning and executing the plot.

Her goal: persuade jurors in federal court in Boston that Tsarnaev deserves a sentence of life in prison rather than the death penalty.

It is an argument the defense team, which includes death penalty specialist David Bruck and Boston's top court-appointed lawyer, Miriam Conrad, will not be able to make in earnest until the jury decides if Tsarnaev is guilty.

Until then, they are left to poke holes in the prosecution's case and work in as many allusions to 26-year-old Tamerlan's influence as the judge will allow, according to legal experts.

The jury got a taste of the approach in the past week when an FBI agent who searched Tsarnaev's college dorm room described finding metal BB pellets, which were packed into the bombs that ripped through the crowd.

Prosecutors also said the brothers practiced shooting with BB guns. Three days after the April 15, 2013 attack, they fatally shot a police officer.

Conrad asked the agent, Kimberly Franks, if the search had turned up actual firearms or just BBs. Franks testified that no guns were found.

When a second FBI agent described finding the Tsarnaevs' Cambridge apartment empty, Conrad noted it had not been vacant when agents arrived four days after the bombing.

Thousands of faithful wave fronds at Pope Francis

Pope Francis led the world's Roman Catholics in Palm Sunday celebrations by paying tribute to those killed for their faith, a reference to the victims of Islamic State militants. Francis, who earlier this month began the third year of his papacy, presided at a colorful procession in St. Peter's Square commemorating the day the Bible says people of Jerusalem welcomed Jesus days before he was crucified. The coming week is one of the busiest in the liturgical calendar for the leader of the world's 1.2 billion Roman Catholics. On Holy Thursday, he presides at two services, including one at a Rome prison where he will wash and kiss the feet of male and female inmates to commemorate Christ's gesture of humility toward his apostles on the night before he died. Francis is the first pope to hold the foot-washing service outside a church and to include women and Muslims, which has upset conservative Catholics. REUTERS

NASA astronaut Scott Kelly and Mikhail Kornienko and Gennady Padalka of the Russian Federal Space Agency (Roscosmos) joined their Expedition 43 crewmates when the hatches between the Soyuz TMA-16M spacecraft and the International Space Station opened. Kelly and Kornienko will spend about a year on the space station to better understand how the human body reacts and adapts to the harsh environment of space. Data from the one-year mission will be used to determine whether there are ways to further reduce the risks on future long-duration missions to an asteroid and eventually Mars.

During the expedition, both a U.S. and a Russian cargo resupply vehicle will arrive at the station, bringing several tons of food, fuel and supplies as well as a host of new science investigations.

CHAPTER SIX MRS. BAKER

I take the bright orange pig from the shelf and hand it to the girl. All of the crocheted animals are twenty apiece, but I give her the pig after hearing what it's for. I remember when my oldest went off to college and how hard it was for the younger ones. I'm seeing it again with the grandkids. Besides, crocheting is more of a hobby than a business. My husband always jokes that I lose money every year because I give so many away. I joke that we lose money every year because he can't leave the festival food alone. I don't blame him, though, we've been here all day. I'm sure he's hungry or thirsty, or just itching to get up and leave the tent, so I hand him the twenty to go and find us a snack. He takes it and makes his way to a food vendor a few booths away.

Five things you need to know

Crash pilot was planning big gesture: Paper

The co-pilot suspected of deliberately crashing an airliner, killing 150 people, had told his girlfriend he was planning a spectacular gesture so "everyone will know my name," a German daily said on Saturday.

The Bild newspaper published an interview with a woman who said she had a relationship in 2014 with Andreas Lubitz, the man French prosecutors believe locked himself alone in the cockpit of the Germanwings Airbus on Tuesday and steered it into the French Alps, killing all on board.

"When I heard about the crash, I remembered a sentence ... he said: 'One day I'll do something that will change the system, and then everyone will know my name and remember it,'" she said.

said the woman, a flight attendant the paper gave the pseudonym of Maria W.

"I didn't know what he meant by that at the time, but now it's obvious," she said. "He did it because he realized that, due to his health problems, his big dream of working at Lufthansa, of a having job as a pilot, and as a pilot on long-distance flights, was nearly impossible."

"He never talked much about his illness, only that he was in psychiatric treatment," she told the paper, adding they finally broke up because she was afraid of him.

The woman also told Bild: "We always talked a lot about work and then he became a different person. He became upset about the conditions we worked under: too little money, fear of losing the contract, too much pressure."

Four-year-old rides bus alone in search of slushie

A 4-year-old Pennsylvania girl surprised a driver and passengers when she boarded a bus alone in the middle of the night on a quest for a sugary slushie, transportation officials said.

Surveillance footage shows the girl, bundled up in all purple, boarding a Philadelphia bus at 3 a.m. on Friday.

The girl, who appeared cheerful as she stretched and dangled her boots off her seat, told bus riders that she wanted to get a slushie, Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority spokeswoman Kristin Geiger said.

Upon noticing the child, the bus driver pulled over, called his control center and waited for police to arrive, Geiger said. The girl was taken unharmed to a nearby hospital, where she was reunited with her parents.

Singapore bids farewell to founding father Lee

Grieving Singaporeans were joined by world leaders on Sunday to pay their final respects to the country's first prime minister, Lee Kuan Yew, as the nation came to a near-halt to honor its "founding father."

Tens of thousands of people waving flags braved heavy rain and lined the streets to catch a last glimpse of Lee as his coffin was taken by gun carriage on a procession through the streets of the country he helped build to his state funeral.

Lee, who died aged 91 on Monday, is credited with founding modern Singapore and transforming it from a small, colonial British trading port into one of the world's wealthiest nations. REUTERS

Seven shot at spring break party in Florida

Three college students were among seven people shot, several critically injured, early Saturday morning at a raucous spring break party in Panama City Beach, Florida, and the suspected shooter was taken into custody, local police said.

Shortly before 1 a.m., officers were called to a building near the beach, where they found the victims, three of whom are students at Alabama A&M University, the Bay County Sheriff's office said in an electronic statement.

A .40-caliber handgun was found in the backyard of the residence.

The suspected shooter, 22-year-old David Jamiel Daniels of Mobile, Alabama, was found nearby and taken into custody. He was charged with seven counts of attempted murder, police said. REUTERS

Air Canada flight slides off Halifax runway

An Air Canada plane slid off a runway and suffered heavy damage while landing in the east coast city of Halifax on Sunday, sending more than 20 passengers and crew to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries.

The incident happened shortly after midnight. The airline said in an update on Sunday afternoon that all but one of those admitted to hospitals had been released.

"We at Air Canada are greatly relieved that no one was critically injured. Yet we fully appreciate this has been a very unsettling experience," Air Canada Chief Operating Officer Klaus Goersch said in a statement. REUTERS

Air Canada said the Airbus A320 flying from Toronto was carrying 133 passengers and five crew members. The airline did not give the cause of the accident but said it was cooperating fully with investigators.

I thought I wanted a Soho House membership before, but now I really, really want one. The private club's Los Angeles outpost recently celebrated its fifth birthday, and to mark the occasion a former membership director is spilling the beans on which big names have been turned away from its cushy confines. "We denied access to every Real Housewife who applied," Tim Geary tells the Hollywood Reporter. "Kim Kardashian has unsuccessfully tried numerous times. Kobe Bryant showed up and chose not to join. We didn't let him up. There was debate over Britney Spears. Not sure how that played out. We tried not to give membership to people who would fuel paparazzi or bring press." This place sounds amazing.

Christine Baranski wants a musical episode of 'The Good Wife'

CRAZIER THINGS HAVE HAPPENED.

Sure, it doesn't make any sense whatsoever for hit legal drama "The Good Wife" to feature an episode where everyone's singing all of a sudden, but wouldn't that still be kind of awesome? Co-star Christine Baranski seems to think so, at least, but she's not holding her breath. "I keep waiting, but it's not in our style," she tells E! News. "How cool would it be if Alicia (Julianna Margulies) just had a dream where there was a nightmare Christmas party where we could make use of all the musical talent?" Pretty cool, Ms. Baranski. Pretty cool.

Taylor Swift dating rumors are back

It's been a hot minute since we've had any speculation about Taylor Swift's love life, and if that's had you feeling deprived I've got some good news for you. Last week, Swift was spotted "getting snuggly" with superstar DJ and producer Calvin Harris at a Kenny Chesney concert in Nashville, and sources say they've been spending time together a lot before then as well, having first met last month at the Brit Awards. "He is taken with her. They connected properly at the Brits, and it's been going on since then," a source says, according to Us Weekly. "It's been going on a few weeks. They actually make a great couple. They are just getting to know each other and we'll see what happens." And Harris is clearly a good sport — or really, really into Swift — because come on, a Kenny Chesney concert? That's dedication.

SOMEONE'S BEEN GETTING SNUGGLY.

This Sacha Baron Cohen movie news is confounding

Sorry, Queen fans, those reports about Sacha Baron Cohen re-joining the planned Freddie Mercury biopic were actually not that accurate. It turns out the band's manager, Jim Beach, was just joking when he said Cohen was back onboard, guitarist Brian May clarifies. Beach "said, in response to inquiries about the progress on the Freddie feature film, that Sacha Baron Cohen had been re-engaged to write, produce and direct the film, as well as starring in all four major roles," May writes. "I'm afraid some folks might have taken it seriously." Cohen was attached to play the iconic singer for years, but officially left the project in 2013.

The Rock's gritty live-action 'Bambi' reboot

The sad part is, this doesn't seem so far-fetched. For Dwayne Johnson's stint hosting "Saturday Night Live" this weekend, the show threw together this hilarious look at Disney's 21st century, live-action approach to the

Sex, love and Tove Lo

Interview. She may have a penchant for bad habits, but that only makes things interesting.

With "Habits" reaching number one on the Billboard charts and an arena tour with Katy Perry behind her, all eyes are on Tove Lo, pop's newest breakthrough artist. We talk to the Swedish electro-pop singer about the dark side of relationships and moving on after getting her heart broken.

On having great, no-strings-attached sex:

"I've had a lot of sex without hoping it will turn into love. I can definitely separate the two. But when you are in love with someone, and you have sex, it's always better. But [good sex] can definitely cloud your judgment. 'Talking Body' is about that. If you start off having great sex, things tend to last longer than if you started by going out on a date, and things just don't click."

The best revenge on an ex:

"It's hard when you've been hurt. All you want is for the other person to be hurt as well. But the best revenge is just to not care anymore. I've been on the other side of it, wanting [my ex] back, and he was like, 'No, you f—ed it up.' That was probably the hardest feeling for me because I felt like I ruined something really good, and now I can't fix it."

Relationships versus single life:

"I like being single more, but somehow I always end up in a relationship. I love being in love. I love the very beginning of a relationship, when things aren't defined, and you're just having a great time together. When you're a couple, sometimes there's all these demands that come with it like, 'Oh, now that we're a couple, you can't do that.' But it becomes really beautiful when you show your flaws. I think it's easier to be single, but it's definitely worth it to be in a relationship when you really love someone."

On falling in love again:

Interview. Jennifer Lawrence says, 'My Oscar lives on my parents' piano'

In between the David O. Russell films "Silver Linings Playbook" and "American Hustle," Jennifer Lawrence reunited with Bradley Cooper for a very different film. "Serena" is a period saga that turns the pair into a husband and wife, the former as a timber company magnate in Depression-era North Carolina, and she is an independent and self-determined woman in an age that was unsympathetic to those like her.

Was working with animals tricky? Did you have to learn how to ride a horse?

I think I can do it pretty well, but I had to learn separately how to handle an eagle. It's so fascinating to work with an animal that has literally no affection in its eyes at all; it's only looking at what it can eat. It's a fascinating creature to hold on your arm, this thing that only kills, and it's

Bonus question

In one of your interviews, you said that you don't know where your Oscar statue is. Have you found it?

Yes, my mother has it! I wanted to hide it, but she thinks that it has to be visible. I didn't like that idea so much. It's as if people come to visit me just to stare at it. But we have found a compromise: "Oscar" is now living in my parents' house. They've put it on the piano.

Intense relationships

On writing about the dark side of love instead of the happy parts

"I've only really had intense relationships. It's like all you see is that other person. And you also go crazy. I've never had this, 'We went out a few times and started liking each other, then we fell in love, and now we're a couple.'"

"I think those relation-

Are you ready for the new SAT?

Experts say students are in for a surprise.

LAKSHMI GANDHI
@LakshmiGandhi
lakshmi.gandhi@metro.us

The new, revised SAT exam will be rolled out in exactly a year, and one tutoring specialist has a message for all students planning to take it: You're in for a big (and unpleasant) surprise.

"The College Board [which administers the exam] has gone out of its way to make the redesigned SAT prep-proof," says Ray Huntington, the founder and CEO of Huntington Learning Center, a tutoring and test-prep company. "If a student depends on tricks and shortcuts, they aren't going to do well."

Huntington notes that while many students and parents have begun to ask him about studying for the new SAT, he expects the public at large to be caught off guard. Here's how to get ready:

Build a strong foundation

"In order to do well in math on the new test, you have to be a good reader," says Huntington, who has been studying the sample questions that have been released so far. "Many of the math problems

The SAT will be revised next year. ISTOCK

Get comfortable with history

Huntington also warns that the passages in the verbal section will be much more complicated than what students are used to. "The redesigned SAT will require historical passages as well as passages based on the global conversation," he explains.

will have a backstory."

Strengthen your writing skills

This is also true of the essay section. "The student will now have to understand the author's argument and verbalize what that argument is," he notes. "Many students will end up summarizing the passage instead of analyzing it."

Online interviews will cut down on the expense and time of traveling for busy students. ISTOCK

Will students soon be interviewing on video for their first jobs?

Are you ready for your close-up?

Molly Congdon
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

For generations of college seniors, those all-important first job interviews have traditionally followed the same script: Applicants put on their best suits, print out their résumés that highlight their internships and part-time jobs and sit anxiously with their portfolios in an office waiting room.

But one entrepreneur is betting those days will soon be over. Chris Young is the CEO and founder of Async Interview, which facilitates job interviews using video. Young came up with the idea for his business as a result of his own frustrations with the labor- (and travel-) intensive interview process.

He sees his company as a solution for both the candidates (who are often still busy juggling classes and homework) and the campus recruiters crisscrossing the country each year — a method for attending interviews without leaving the comfort of home.

Nervous about the prospect of interviewing on camera for your dream job? We asked Young for his suggestions on how to prepare:

Don't complicate your life

"Use a computer instead of a tablet or smartphone," Young says. "It will give you better quality, and you won't have to awkwardly hold anything."

Top to bottom

Practice, practice, practice

"Get comfortable with being onscreen," Young says. "Take advantage of all the practice you can get. Skype with your mom or a friend and have them ask you potential interview questions."

Fold those flannel pajama pants, and put them back in the drawer. "Be sure to dress from head to toe, not just from the waist up," he says. "This is not a no-pants interview; sometimes they may be able to see what you are wearing below the waist."

Don't be a silhouette

Were you thinking about sitting in front of that window? Think again. "If you sit in front of a light, the recruiter won't be able to see your face," Young says. "You want all of the light in front of you, shining on your face."

Stick it

"Tape notes to your wall. You can list certain talking points that you'd like to bring up no matter what questions are asked."

Stay focused

Remember there are no do-overs in interviews. "It's a simulated environment, and you're unable to re-record responses," Young says. "When the interview starts, that's it. You can't say, 'Hold on, let me start over again.'"

Letters to the editor

Netanyahu, McCain right to warn about Iran, wrong about settlements

Re: 'McCain should give bloody dispute more respect' (Metro, March 25) I agree with the recent letter writer who said that we must show respect to President Obama. However, the letter writer made a very disrespectful remark about Sen. John McCain "carrying water for Israel." When you consider the fact that some of Iran's leaders have called for the destruction of Israel, you cannot blame Sen. McCain and Prime Minister Netanyahu for being concerned about Israel's safety. I have disagreed with Netanyahu when it comes to his settlement policy and his reluctance to establish a Palestinian state. However, when it comes to his warnings about Iran, he (and McCain) are completely in the right.

JOHN FRANCIS FOX, VIA EMAIL

In a state of satisfaction

Re: 'Cruz smart to look into Obamacare' (Metro, March 27-29) Note to Frank Dixon: I wonder where you are getting your information on "how bad" Obamacare is. In New York State, my health insurance premium was cut by almost two-thirds when I went from private insurance to coverage provided via New York State of Health. In addition, the law required my new health insurance carrier to cover things like preventive care, which my old (and much more expensive policy) did not! My first hand experience is that I am extremely happy with Obamacare, but perhaps since Texas has one of the highest rates of uninsured in the nation due to its resistance to the Affordable Care Act, Sen. Cruz's Texas constituents may not be as happy as I am.

Celtics have big game in Charlotte

The playoff-hopeful Celtics have a quick turnaround after losing to the high-powered Clippers, 119-106, Sunday afternoon. Monday night, at 7, the C's will face the Hornets in Charlotte, looking to create some separation in the standings. The Hornets entered Sunday just a game back for the final postseason spot in the East.

Does Red Sox hurler Rick Porcello have what it takes to perform like a top-of-the-rotation starter? / GETTY IMAGES

Porcello closest Sox have to ace

MLB. Is it finally time for Rick Porcello to emerge as an elite big-league starter?

With Opening Day just a week away, the Red Sox didn't trade for Cole Hamels and still don't have a so-called "ace" in their rotation, but they certainly have pitchers in their rotation that have the stuff to potentially emerge as one — none more than Rick Porcello.

Porcello was traded to the Red Sox from the Tigers as part of the Yoenis Cespedes trade this past offseason, and the 26-year-old is just entering the prime of his career.

A New England native was sometimes lost in the mix with the dominant pitchers in Detroit in Justin Verlander, Anibal Sanchez and Max Scherzer.

Porcello posted an ERA of 3.43 last year (the same as Sanchez) and that ERA would've been the best on the Red Sox' staff last year, with the exception of Jon Lester before he was traded. Furthermore, it would've been the best over the last two years taking away Clay Buchholz's 16 starts during an injury-plagued 2013 season.

His numbers are better than some may think. His three shutouts last year led the American League. His 1.8 walks per nine innings were eighth in the American League, and season could've been even better as he went 0-4 with a 6.20 ERA in September. Most known for his ability to get ground balls, Porcello was third in all of baseball in 2013 getting grounders 58 percent of the time and then 51 percent last year. His two-seam sinker is his best pitch, and the pitch he relies on most to get ground balls.

"He's been on a staff with a lot of big-name pitchers and really good starting pitchers, so he sort of gets buried in the names in Detroit because he's been part of such a good rotation," GM Ben Cherington said after the trade in December.

"He's been really good in his own right. Given his age, we feel there may be more upside. Even what he is right now we think is really going to help us."

Porcello is entering his seventh season in the majors and there are signs showing his best years are coming up. He eclipsed the 200-inning mark for the first time last season, finishing with 204.2. And although his strikeout totals were down last year, he made up for it by having more control. His 1.8 walks per nine innings were the best of his career.

Finally, he's proven to be durable — something an ace needs to be — pitching in at least 31 games in each of the last four seasons. With there being so much talk of the Red Sox not having an ace in their rotation, don't sleep on Porcello, as he is coming from one of the best rotations in all of baseball and entering the prime of his career.
